

have to keep reminding ourselves, the language we use does not resonate because we keep talking about balanced budget, CR's, debt ceiling extensions, and it does not mean a thing to many people, but their children mean a lot to people and their grandchildren mean a lot, and that is what this debate is all about. It is not about numbers, it is not about a continuing resolution, it is not about a debt ceiling extension, it is not about any of us in this Chamber; it is about trying to do something for a lot of our young people who are going to want to find jobs.

I must say, as I read the Washington Post editorial again and again today—because I could not believe it; it was a good editorial—it talked about the real default, the default of leadership on the other side of the aisle.

I must say, as the Senator from New Mexico said earlier, when you do a lot of heavy lifting, you get a lot of criticism. We have been doing a lot of heavy lifting. We believe the American people gave us somewhat of a mandate to make fundamental change last November, and we have kept our word and our promise. We have worked together, and we have had some bipartisan support, just as we have had tonight. So it is not just a Republican effort. We had a number of Senators join us earlier this year on a balanced budget amendment. We lost by one vote. We hope to bring it up again.

Now, President Clinton says a lot of things at different times and in different ways. Yesterday, at a news conference or in a short statement, he mentioned the phrase "balanced budget" 16 times, by actual count. If the people who watched television last night saw the clips of what he has been saying in the last 2 years, he talked about a 5-year balanced budget when he was a candidate, then maybe 10 years, maybe 9, maybe 8, maybe 7.

Now, I think the President could indicate that he is in good faith by signing this bill. There is nothing in this bill that is going to hamstring the President of the United States. Nothing commits him to do anything, except it says we shall enact a balanced budget amendment in the next 7 years, using CBO estimates—updated CBO estimates—the very estimates that President Clinton asked us to use. CBO is the Congressional Budget Office, for those who do not understand these initials all the time. But when he first spoke to a joint session of Congress, he boasted about using CBO—Congressional Budget Office—figures in his budget and said they had been, as I recall, fairly accurate over the years. And they have been accurate over the years.

So we are not asking too much of the President of the United States. I am not one who advocates shutting down the Government of the United States. I would like to find some resolution, and if we cannot do it with this continuing resolution, maybe we can figure out a way tomorrow to resolve the differences.

What harm does it do the President of the United States to sign a bill that says we will have a balanced budget by the year 2002? He said today on television that he did not mind the 48 Democrats voting with Republicans last night because it was not binding. Well, if it is not binding on the 48 Democrats, why should it be binding on the President of the United States if he signs it?

Again, I want to thank my colleagues tonight who said to our Federal workers that it is time to go back to work, and said to the President of the United States, it is time to balance the budget. Again, I say, as I said earlier today, I do not think it does a lot of good to have press conferences every day where we say one thing and the President says something else. Why do we not sit down together, without the press? We are all adults. I believe the American people are looking to all of us for leadership. So the Government has been shut down Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and it will be shut down tomorrow. Is that enough time? I think it depends on the leadership that we can produce in the next 24 hours. If not, we are going to go into the next week and then into the next week. I do not see much opportunity next week to have any resolution.

So I say, first of all, Mr. President, sign this resolution. It is not a bad resolution. I am told that the only objectionable feature is the balanced budget language, which does not legally bind the President of the United States. It seems to me that we may be very close. If the President would sign that tomorrow, and we send it down tomorrow—and I assume we will—then everybody can come back to work on Monday, and we could go on about the Balanced Budget Act of 1995, which we hope to finish tomorrow night around 10, 11 o'clock, maybe a little later. And then on Saturday morning, we will take up a conference report or two, and then Members could be off with their families for Thanksgiving, as many would like to do.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include the Senator from Illinois, Senator CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN, who would like to speak for up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

THE SHUTDOWN

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I would like to comment on three items. One, I compliment Senator BOXER and Senator SNOWE for their initiative to treat us like everyone else; that is, if we are working and other Federal employees are working, and they are not getting paid, we should not get paid. Most of the public in our home States do not realize that all of us have voted for that already. We voted for that twice already. Unfortunately, the House of Representatives has either inadvertently or, in fact, refused to bring that up. I will not make a judgment about that. But we have been on record for some time.

I think it makes good sense. I just depart from one comment made by one of our colleagues who supported this initiative. I do not think the Congressmen and Senators are smug about this. The truth about this much of this is artificial. I have been here for 23 years and although we have never had this extent of a crisis, we have shut down for a couple of hours or a day. In every case, it has been standard operating procedure that everybody is made whole. The Federal employees—everybody is made whole.

So I do not think most of our colleagues thought that this sort of stupidity would go on as long as it has. Therefore, I do not think my colleagues sat there and said, "By the way, I know people like the stenographer here, who is working, and I know he is not getting paid, and I do not care; ha, ha, ha, he is not going to get his paycheck." I do not think anybody thought about that.

I want to make this clear. Sometimes, in our zeal, we make it sound like this place is a little more heartless than it is. The truth is that there is an artificial element to this and, in all probability, nobody is going to end up losing a cent in this—unless this does go on for weeks or a month, which none of us wish to happen, and I think probably none of us believe will happen.

Now, sometimes we do stupid things. Sometimes ego and pride and politics and partisanship get in the way and everybody wakes up one morning and says, "My Lord, how did we get here?" I am hopeful that will not happen. That leads me to my second point.

My second point. I have great respect—and I mean this sincerely—for Senator DOLE, the majority leader. I have served with him and next to him for 23 years now. You cannot be around somebody that long and not get some sense of the man, the person. I do not know anybody who is smarter in this place, and I do not know anybody who is a better legislator in this place, or that I have had any better relationship or dealings with than him. I make one distinction in what he said. When he said the President is not bound in any real way if he were to sign the continuing resolution that the Senate sent to him, and he then mentioned the CBO figures, Congressional Budget Office figures—and he did accurately say the President, in the past, had mentioned Congressional Budget Office figures. But whether the President said it in the past or not, we all say things that turn out not to make so much sense sometimes—at least I have.
